Welcome

This is Delray Beach—or as much of Delray Beach as a few words, a few pictures, and a few pages, can convey.

But the real life charm of our town is beyond expression by even the highest skill in letter, and art, and photography. South Sea Island seascapes. Neo-Venetian canal systems, with Florida fun fleets as successors to the gondolas. Fresh modern homes in lush tropical settings. Every recreational facility—from shuffle-board courts to golf and polo and the deep blue seas. Sunshine and wonderful weather all year long. In a word—what's good in Florida is BEST in Delray Beach!

Welcome to our home—please make it yours for a day, a week, a month, a year, or a lifetime. We'll be glad to have you.

HISTORY OF DELRAY BEACH

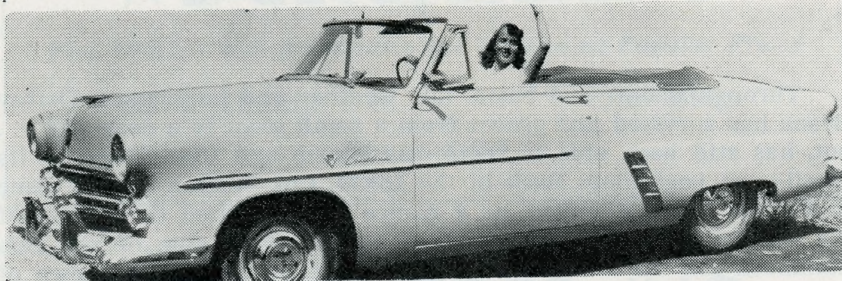

Through booms and busts, fair weather and hurricanes, Delray Beach has survived and grown from a small town to a near city . . . but, has still been able to retain the charm and friendliness of its small-town beginning. Back in the 1880's, Col. William Linton came to Florida from Michigan, at a glance he recognized the beauty of the country and saw the potential agricultural value of the rich hammock soil. As a result of this foresight, he founded the town of Linton which eventually became Delray Beach. The fertility of the land turned the wheels of progress through the first two decades of the city's history. Abundant crops of tomatoes were grown and several canneries were in operation. The pineapple industry thrived and commercial fishing brought profits to many. Continued development along these lines was halted when transportation problems, drought and processing difficulties discouraged the populace. In 1911 the town was incorporated as Delray Beach, and the town prospered. The early 1920's saw great increases in visitors and the incomes of the residents boomed. Then came the bust and on top of that economic disaster, the 1928 hurricane struck with a vengeance and destroyed the physical portion of what had been left of the bust. Lives were lost, nearly every home was damaged.

The ensuing years were rough, and only those hardy ones remained to tough it out. In the 1930's a small artists' colony sprang up and flourished and helped hold the town together during what proved to be its worst years.

In the last 20 years the town has enjoyed a steady, healthy growth. Its development along social, financial and cultural lines has been held at a high standard by the city's leaders. Today, Delray Beach, after 56 years, stands out among all other cities as one of the finest resort areas of Florida.

The development of the gladioli industry, dairy and cattle industry and farming is another phase in Delray Beach's growth that is continually adding to the financial stability of the community. But, majestic as its growth has been, Delray Beach still maintains its small-town heritage of friendliness that was a part of its beginning and which has always had a part in its history.

The Library

The Delray Beach Library is housed in a beautiful new building located right in the heart of the business section of the city.

During the summer months there are many young peoples' activities, such as story hours, stamp clubs, art classes and reading clubs held in the library. There is a separate room for children with reference material, fiction, non-fiction and easy-to-read books for the little tots. For the adults there is a very complete reference department, an extensive department on Florida, and of course the fiction and non-fiction volumes.

The library also houses an excellent gem and mineral collection and a large periodical department. An entire shelf of Florida garden books and pamphlets has been furnished the library by the Delray Beach Garden Club.

The library is open to the public, and an outdoor reading patio is a unique feature that is enjoyed by many of our winter visitors.

The Beach

Florida's climate and Florida's beaches have always been, and still are, its major attraction.

Here in Delray Beach we are especially well favored with climate and beaches.

Our shores are gently caressed by the tropical trade winds that float across the Gulf Stream, which is just a few yards from our lovely beach homes, apartments and hotels. Here you can enjoy surf bathing practically every day of the year. Bathing is safe, for the entire mile length of our public beach is soft sand with a sloping shore and gentle rolling surf.

Lifeguards are on duty throughout the day for your safety and an enclosed area is provided for the children and novice bathers.

Yes, you will surely enjoy your surf bathing at Delray Beach.

For those who just wish to enjoy the sun, there is no better place in the whole world than Delray Beach. A wide expanse of soft sand where one can relax in comfort and take full advantage of "Old Sol's" invigorating rays.

Cabanas are available up and down the entire mile length of the beach for a small service charge.

A public pavilion is at the beachside with comfortable chairs under cover for those who just wish to rest and relax.

Looking north on Ocean Boulevard in Delray Beach

The Beach Road

Always the winter visitor is attracted by a drive along the ocean and in Delray Beach. The entire beach is bordered by the beautiful North and South Ocean Boulevard. This boulevard is a portion of Florida Highway A-1-A which follows the ocean, for the most part, from Jacksonville to Miami. However, in Delray Beach it is so situated that the ocean is in view the entire distance from the south to the north city limits. It is a beautiful drive, with its homes and apartments on one side and the beautiful Atlantic on the other.

There is plenty of activity, too, for Delray Beach's mile-long public beach is located just off the Beach Road, and for those who just like to watch, it's a great sport to see so many healthy, happy people enjoying the surf and sun.

Gladioli Festival

South Florida's favorite flower, the gorgeous gladioli, is honored each year at the South Florida Gladioli Festival held in Delray Beach. The seventh annual celebration takes place February 23-28, 1952.

1952 Gladioli Queen

Also on display are other resources and products of South Florida, including livestock and farm exhibits, agricultural and horticultural displays, commercial and industrial exhibits, educational and vocational projects, as well as displays of historical, scientific and artistic interest.

Each Festival opens with a mammoth parade of decorated floats, bands, drum corps, floral displays and a host of other marching and rolling units. The colorful spectacle attracts festive crowds numbering as high as 30,000.

Feminine, as well as floral beauty is honored with the selection of a Gladioli Queen, chosen from South Florida communities, who reigns over the week-long Festival.

Presentation of each Festival is directed by a non-profit organization of community leaders and gladioli growers under the leadership of R. C. Lawson, president.

Volunteer participation by civic, service and fraternal organizations of the area make the Gladioli Festival an outstanding example of true community spirit and cooperation in each year's tribute to the South Florida gladioli.

An inland waterway cruise is a most delightful way to view some of Florida's most beautiful scenes.

Inland Waterways

The famous inland waterway passes through Delray Beach, and those who wish to send or bring their yacht with them when they come to Florida will find a grand welcome and a safe harbor waiting for them in Delray Beach.

City-owned dockage is available, and other additional basin accommodations are nearly completed, so that both the visitor and his yacht will find a pleasant and comfortable welcome waiting for them in this friendly city.

Cruises up and down this inland waterway offer some interesting, exciting trips. An ideal way to see Florida with its contrasts. Modern towns and cities on one side and wild tropical foliage and highly colored tropical birds on the other makes the average cruise on this beautiful waterway a trip through Fairyland.

Tennis

This sport has long been a favorite of both the residents and visitors of Delray Beach.

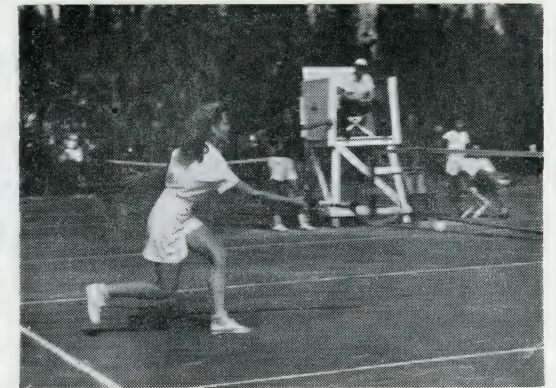

During the winter season Delray Beach's fine courts are in daily operation. The city of Delray Beach keeps these courts in tip-top condition. A group of local citizens acts as an advisory committee in the operation of these city tennis courts and the tennis activities. One of the prime duties of this committee is the operation of the Gulf Stream Junior Tennis Tourney. This tournament is held each spring on two consecutive week ends and it brings to Delray Beach some of the best junior tennis players in the state.

The committee arranges for housing and entertainment for the young visiting players. This tournament creates a great deal of interest, not only in Delray Beach, but also throughout the entire state, for this is one of Florida largest sanctioned junior tournaments.

Delray Beach's Tennis Committee watches with close interest all beginner players and form and endurance are spotted early. Then the young player progresses from tournament to tournament until his skill has been developed to a point where he may even reach National Rating.

Every day you can watch these young potential stars practicing and playing on the courts at Delray Beach ... and if you are one who likes to play this exciting game you will always find plenty of players around the courts who will be glad to have you join their game ... for Delray Beach is a Friendly City.

Polo

The winter home of the Sport of Kings. Polo has for nearly 30 years been centered at Delray Beach. At the beginning of the winter season polo stables are moved from their summer location to "Gulf Stream," just north of the city limits of Delray Beach. At the height of the season every week you see a match game played on the famous Gulf Stream Polo Field between national and international championship teams. Highlight of the polo season is the annual sixteen-goal handicap tournament which brings into play at Delray Beach the top players of the polo world.

This thrilling game is the world's most spectacular sport. When you watch your first polo game at Delray Beach this season and see those swinging mallets and hear the thundering hoofs of those almost human ponies that love the game, you realize why polo is the Sport of the Kings.

It is a must on your "what-to-see list" this winter in Delray Beach.

Fun in the Sun

Year-round outdoor living that is made possible in Delray Beach by its marvelous climate actually amazes the newcomer. However, as soon as he realizes that here is actually a climate in which the great outdoors can be fully enjoyed day after day throughout the entire year, he begins to lay his entire stay to fit in with the pleasant, informal mode of living that makes Delray Beach so attractive to its multitude of winter and summer visitors and its enthusiastic year-round residents.

Golf

Certainly you expect to continue your golf game while you vacation in Delray Beach. Here you will find an excellent 18-hole municipally owned course that is supervised by a committee of local golf enthusiasts. Moderate greens fees are charged and the course is open to the golfing public. A golf pro is on hand at all times to help you with your game.

Tournaments are held throughout the winter season for women golfers, and during the summer months a twilight golf league is in operation, with local businessmen competing. This tourney carries over a several week period.

So, either winter or summer, the ardent golfer will always find plenty of activity at the course and at the clubhouse you will find friendly people always.

The Business District

The Delray Beach business district is fast becoming known as one of the finest shopping areas in South Florida. This is due, in part, to the tremendous number of exclusive shops that have selected this city as the ideal location for their stores.

The constantly increasing influx of winter and summer visitors has been responsible for this. These visitors from the North have demanded the very best in material and merchandise, consequently the businessmen of Delray Beach have met this challenge. New store buildings are constantly being erected to meet the demand of the merchant for modern display space for their merchandise.

So now, the shoppers in Delray Beach may shop in modern, well-stocked stores which handle merchandise that is above the average in quality. In fact, in the past few years, many shoppers are coming to Delray from the larger surrounding cities.

Atlantic Avenue was the original hub of the city's business, but with the increasing demand for additional services and stores, the business area is now spreading out from this original center.

New and modern food stores, specialty shops, department stores, drug stores, appliance stores and all the other types of businesses that make a complete shopping district will be found here in Delray Beach. So when you arrive, you can be assured that all your wants and needs can be supplied by our pleasant, congenial businessmen.

A City of Homes

Although Delray Beach has, for years, been known as one of Florida's finest resort towns, it is also known as a City of Homes.

Many of Delray Beach visitors have arrived to spend a week or a month and have remained to make this lovely city their permanent home. Responsible for this is, of course, Delray Beach's fine climate and lovely beaches, but more than this, the friendly welcome of the local residents to the newcomer has been responsible for the steady growth of the town.

Residential subdivisions have been developed throughout the entire city. The lovely new homes are being occupied just as rapidly as it is possible to build them.

Of course, this surge of building is rapidly increasing the population of the city, but regardless of the rapid growth, Delray Beach still retains its small town atmosphere and friendliness . . . for this beautiful city still remains a City of Homes.

Accommodations

Although Delray Beach is a city of homes, it also has always been Vacation Land, and consequently, the number of hotels and apartments have increased with the growth of the city.

Rentals are usually available on a daily, weekly, monthly or a seasonal basis.

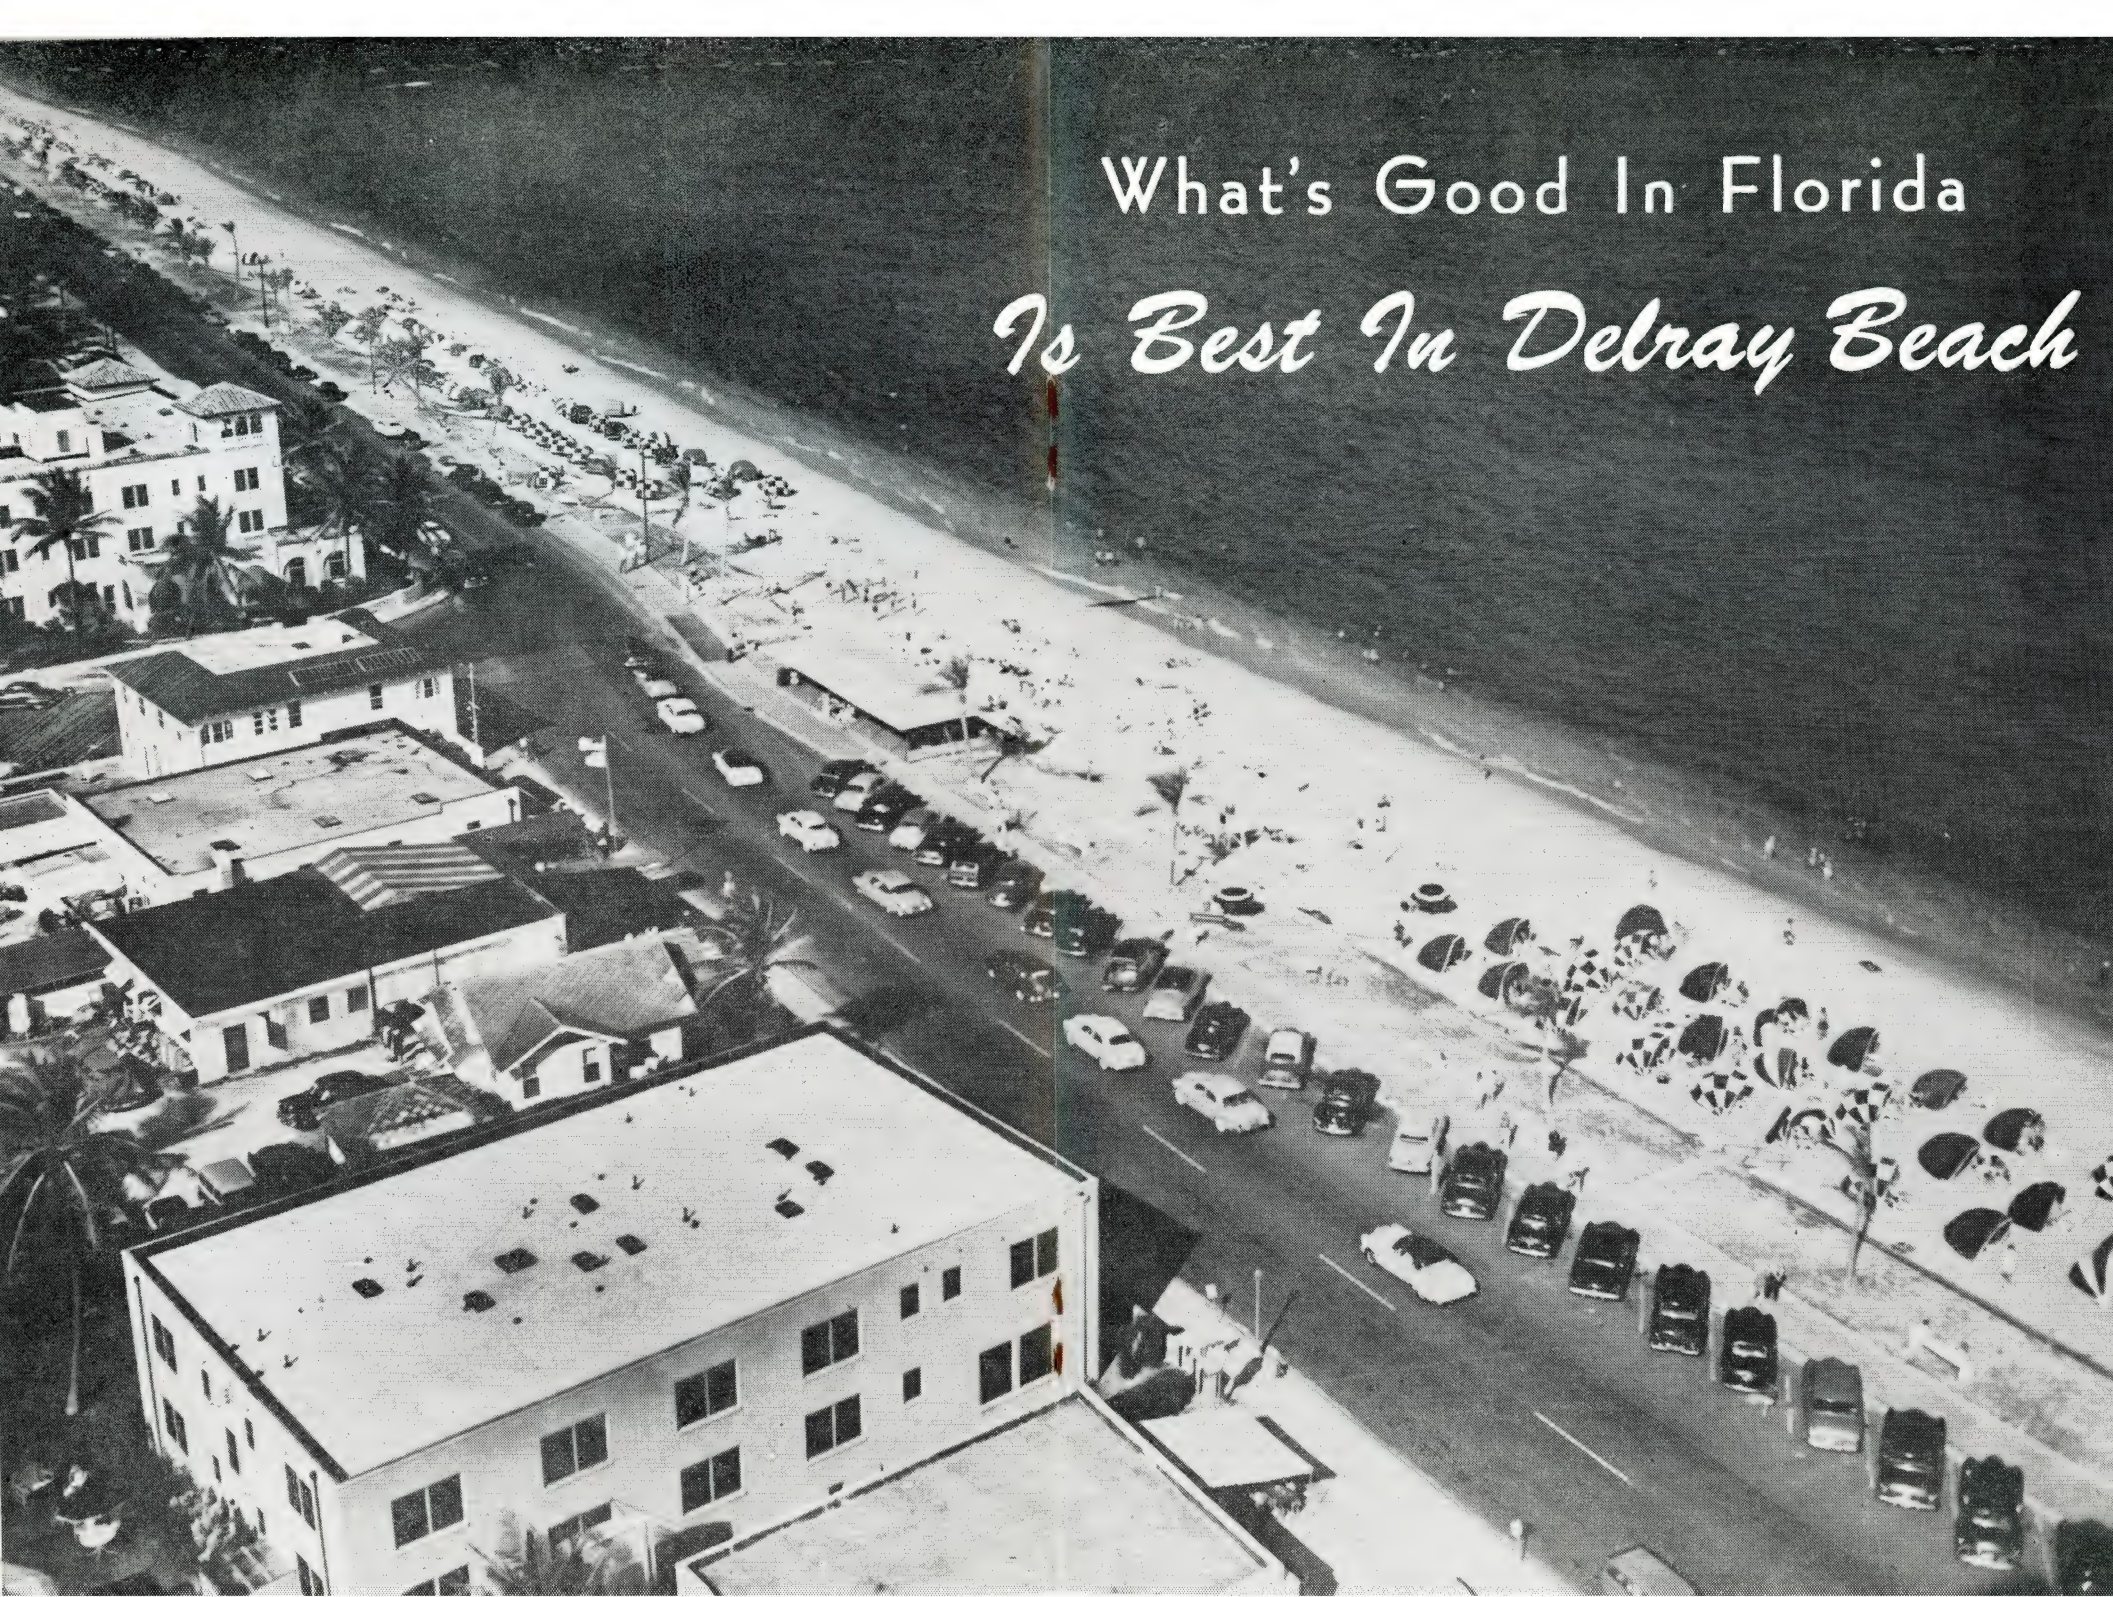

Many of these are located right on the beach, but no matter where you stay in Delray Beach, you are never more than just a few short blocks from the ocean.

In addition to the city's many hotels, apartments and home rentals, those who wish can find any number of suitable accommodations in private homes. Then, on the city's edge there are a number of desirable motor courts.

There are six commercial laundries and seven dry cleaners ready to serve you. During the season there are over 25 fine restaurants that operate in the area.

A complete list of the members of the Chamber of Commerce will be found on pages 67 through 73 of this Guide.

A few of the 1952 Fishing Tourney prizes and prize winners.

The Delray Beach Fishing Tournament

Getting to be one of the oldest annual events in Delray Beach is the Delray Beach Fishing Tournament. This year's tournament will be the seventh annual and, if it follows the pattern of previous contests, will be even bigger and better than ever before.

The tournament conducted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Delray Beach was started in 1946 in an effort to promote the outstanding fishing available in the Delray Beach, Boynton and Boca Raton area. It has been under the chairmanship or co-chairmanship of R. N. (Dick) Banting and A. L. (Bobby) Miller since its inception.

The contest is sponsored financially by the City of Delray Beach which has recognized the publicity value of the widespread press releases and colorful certificates sent all over the world as a result of the tournament activities.

An outstanding array of trophies are offered to contestants in the tournament's 36 regular prize classes. In addition, each year prizes are awarded for special classifications through the interest of citizens vitally concerned in the growth and future development of the tourney.

COBIA (Rachycentron Canadus)

This is a fish that is usually taken in the offshore waters of Florida, over rocky bottoms, reef, and is often found around outside channel markers.

In the Delray Beach area this fish becomes almost a common—a bottom feeder. He puts up a dogged fight, making short, hard runs and at times clearing the water in sudden leaps.

The color is a soft, warm brown with a darker stripe on the side, running from head to tail. The belly is a light grayish cream. He has a large flat head and wide mouth. The average cobia runs from 10 to 15 pounds. However, 40 to 50 pounds is not uncommon, and in the waters around Delray Beach, the cobia appear to run larger than in most other parts of Florida. This is due to the rocky reefs that are found offshore which are peculiar to this area.

The cobia is considered excellent as to food value.

CROAKER (Micropogon Undulatus)

This is a fish that is found in shallow, grassy bottoms of protected waters. They are also found along sandy beaches in the surf. The color is brassy silver, with broken lines of dark brown spots on the upper sides and dorsal fin. On its chin will be found minute barbels.

Shrimp is the principal food of the croaker . . . and as for table use it is considered first rate.

SAILFISH (Istiophorus Americanus)

The favorite of the sports fisherman . . . the sail is without question the most sought after game fish in Florida waters.

His first vicious slash at the trolled bait, plus the terrific battle that follows the setting of the hook, has earned this magnificent finny battler the title, "King of the Sport Fish."

Powerfully constructed, this indomitable fighter, when hooked will time after time leap clear of the water, shaking his mighty head in anger. With his full sail extended he will tail walk across the water's surface in an attempt to free himself from the angler's grasp . . . truly, here is a fish to delight the heart of any sportsman.

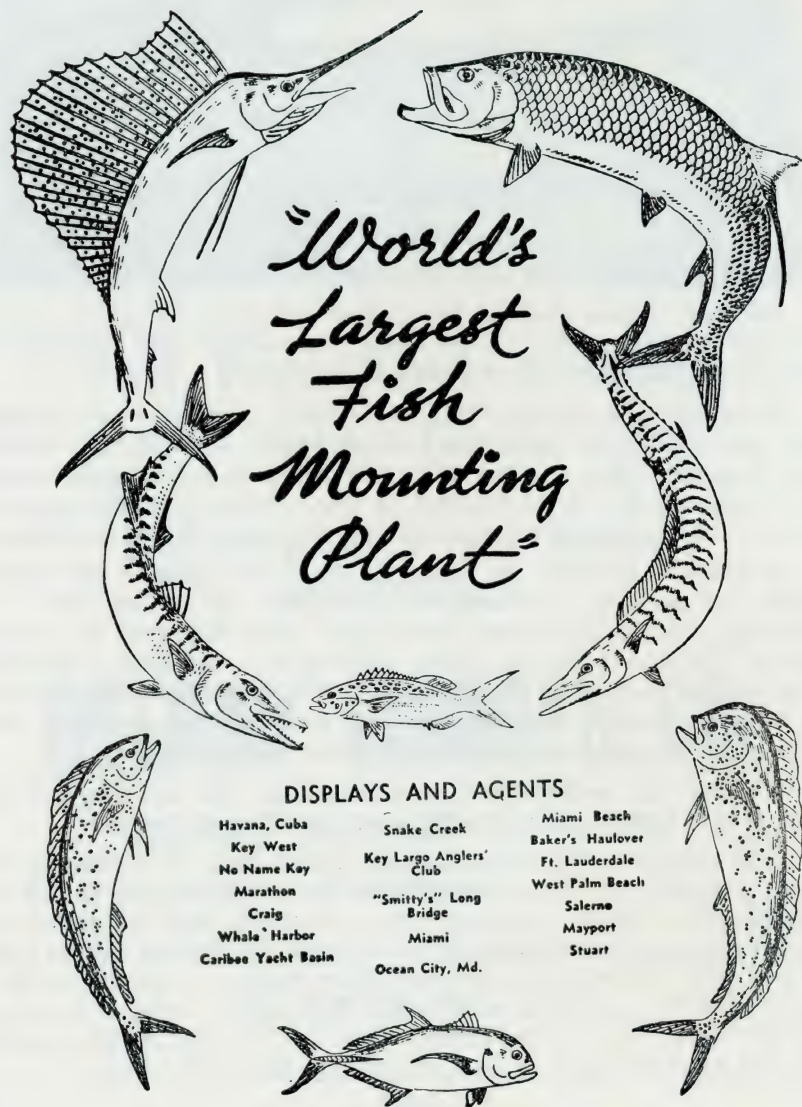

In addition to being the "King of the Game Fishes," the sail is one of the ocean's most beautiful fish. The sail of this fish is a distinctive purple color with black dots, while the body is a deep blue on top and down the sides, turning to a brilliant glistening silver on the body. The rapier-like bill of this gamester is used by the sailfish to subdue its prey. The first slashing blow stuns its food which then is picked up later in a leisurely-like manner.

The average sailfish will measure from six and one-half to seven feet in length and will weigh between 35 to 50 pounds.

It is usually taken while trolling a bait from an outrigger. At the first strike the line is jerked from the outrigger and should be dropped back without any drag, for a 10- count, then throw on the drag of the reel and be prepared to do battle. If the sail fails to take the bait after the dropback, reel the line in rapidly to attract the fish. When he strikes again drop back the line again. Often it is necessary to repeat this several times before he will finally pick up the bait, but when he does . . . look out, for the battle will be on!

YELLOW GRUNT (Hemulon Sciurus)

One of the most colorful of the Grunt family, the body is yellowish with a dozen or so broad brassy lateral bands that are edged with pale blue. On the snout, the stripes are a bright blue. The fins are yellowish on the edge.

This fish is numerous in Florida waters. They run in schools and are caught easily while bottom fishing. Cut mullet or dead shrimp is the commonly used bait.

SNOOK (Centropomus Undecimalis)

Here is a fish that furnishes sport for all. This baby is fished for and caught by all types of anglers.

The bridge fisherman comes into his own when fishing for this gamester. A silver color with a dark back and a distinctive lateral line running from the head to the tail makes this an easy fish to identify.

The snook is found in both the ocean and canals and is usually found in large numbers around piers and jetties. He is also found in brackish streams and canals sometimes far distant from salt water.

Baits used in catching this fish vary from live shrimp and mullet to cut bait. The plug fisherman, fly and spincaster using plug and feathers can have a field day fishing for Mr. Snook, who can always be depended upon to put up a battle that will satisfy the sporting instincts of any angler.

The snook is considered fair as to eating quality.

WHITE MARLIN (Makaira Albida)

One of the smaller varieties of the spear fishes, this game fighter usually appears off the Florida Coast in March and April.

The white marlin is usually hooked while surface trolling with whole fish as bait (such as mackerel, small bonita or bonefish).

The white marlin is greenish cast on the back and the forward end of the dorsal fin which is sickle shaped and is more rounded than that of its larger brother, the blue marlin.

The flesh of the white marlin is excellent when smoked. Average weight is from 50 to 90 pounds.

POMPANO (Trachinotus Carolinus)

Here is one of the most sought after food fishes of Florida waters. Found in the surf and inlets and rivers where they run in and out with the tides.

The surf fisherman usually finds the sand-flea the best bait, with shrimp and cut bait running a close second. Casting or trolling with small feathers amid the inlets and off bridges also produces good catches of this highly prized fish.

The pompano is often confused with its near relative, the permit. At first glance, both fish appear identical. The principal difference is found in the rays of the dorsal fin. The pompano will have 25 or more rays, while the dorsal of the permit will have 18 to 21 rays. This ray count of the dorsal fin will give absolute identification.

The average weight of the pompano, which is grayish-blue on the back and upper sides, shading downward to silver. Average weight, one to three pounds. Occasionally one is taken in excess of five to seven pounds.

LADY FISH, Chiro (Elops Sarus)

Here is a fish that will produce plenty of sport for the light-tackle fisherman. The lady fish, when hooked on light tackle, will give any angler all the sport he wants, for this fish, pound for pound, is considered by many as the equal of any fish in fighting qualities.

The lady fish is most numerous along the coast line, in inlets and near cut banks and bars. In fact, they are usually found anywhere there is a good tide flow.

A brilliant silver in color, with mossy green back and fins, the lady fish is relatively small in size. The average weight is from 2 to 3 pounds . . . a 6-pounder is considered large.

The lady fish is not a good food fish, because it is very bony, but for sport it is hard to beat.

KING MACKEREL—Kingfish (Scomgeromorus Cavalla)

The king mackerel, or kingfish, as it is known in Florida, is one of the important fish in our seas. He furnishes grand sport for the angler, being a hard, gamey fighter that rushes at a trolled bait with a ferocity that amazes the novice angler.

Often when striking a bait his rush will carry him clear of the water in a leap through the air that has the fisherman gazing skyward in wonder.

The flesh of the king is dark and firm and is delicious. He has long been a favored fish commercially, but because of his game fighting attributes he is much sought after by the sport fisherman

FLORIDA LARGE-MOUTH BASS (Micropterus saidoides floridanus)

An unpredictable but lovable scoundrel, the large-mouthed bass is appropriately called the King of American Fresh-Water Game Fishes. Its many and mixed traits make it the most sought-after game fish in the world.

Bass grow larger in this section of the country, enough larger so that they are usually classified in a separate division, as far as national contest entries are concerned.

Tossed together are courage, stamina, viciousness, cunning, versatility, stubbornness, fight and just pure cussedness.

At times it will spurn the most attractive artificial bait to gobble up a worm or minnow. Again, it will pass up good natural bait to smash any old lure. But when Mister Bass is in the mood he can be a worthy antagonist.

SPOTTED SEA TROUT (Cynoscion Nebulosus)

The spotted sea trout is beautifully colored with a blue-gray iridescence along the back, turning to a bright silver on the sides and belly with numerous conspicuous black spots on the upper half of the body, dorsal and tail fins.

The lures that this fish will take is almost limitless. In addition to natural baits, they will strike both surface and underwater plugs, spoons, feathers and flies.

BLUEFISH (Pomatomus Saltatrix)

Here is the fish that delights the heart of the Florida surf fisherman. The bluefish is a wandering fish that ranges the Atlantic Coast from Brazil to Nova Scotia. The fall run of bluefish usually strikes the Florida Coast during October, and during this run the beaches are lined with the patient surf fishermen that have been waiting for their appearance.

During this migration, the surface of the sea is often whipped to a froth with the fury of this voracious fish as they feed on schools of mullet.

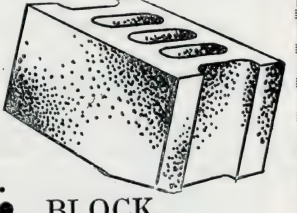

Strip and cut bait, spoons and plugs are all used in taking this much sought after fish, the average weight of which runs from 2 to 4 pounds.

TRIGGER FISH (Balistes Carolinesis)

The name trigger fish comes from the three spines in the structure of the dorsal fin. These fish have a very tough leathery skin, brown in color. The trigger fish is not caught in any great numbers because of its small mouth.

Average weight is from 1 to 8 pounds and is considered good for table use.

Surf Fishing

Here is a kind of fishing that appeals to many winter visitors.

The equipment that is used by a surf fisherman can be just as elaborate or as simple as he desires. Standard equipment is a surf pole of a length that pleases the user, a salt-water reel, some 4-to-6-ounce weights and a line that will withstand some rough usage. A hundred yards of this line should be a minimum, then a wire leader, a hook to suit the bait you are using . . . shrimp or cut mullet and sand-crabs being that usually used in this area, and you cast from the beach to the fish that range up and down the shoreline in search of food.

However, surf fishing can give the plug caster or spinning enthusiast a grand opportunity to test his skill. Tie into a 20-or-30-pound jack crevalle with light tackle and you will agree that surf fishing can be one of the most thrilling you ever tried. Delray Beach surf fishing produces some fine catches of bluefish, pompano, snapper, along with some jack crevalle that almost reach world record proportion. So, when you visit Delray Beach, and want to go fishing, give the surf fishing a try . . . It's tops!

JACK CREVALLE (Caranx Hippas)

Its color is olive on the back, the sides are yellow overlaid with silver. The belly is yellow and the gill cover on the upper edge has a distinctive black spot and often another at the base of the pectoral fin.

The forehead is blunt, the tail is hard with a deep fork. The mouth is large with an undershot jaw.

Its average weight is from 2 to 4 pounds. In Florida it often reaches the weight of 40 pounds.

It is a hard fighter and if hooked in the surf on light tackle, the angler is in for a battle that he will never forget.

TRIPLE TAIL (Labotes Surinamensis)

A bottom feeder that is not taken in great numbers in Florida waters. Usually travel singularly in open water. This fish is a dusky green on the back, lighter on the belly. Average size, 5 to 7 pounds. Excellent food value.

Civic and Cultural Life In Delray Beach

Civic Clubs and Fraternal Organizations play an important part in the enjoyment of life in Delray Beach. CHANNEL BASS (Sciaenops Ocellatus)

The Channel Bass, often known as "Redfish" in Florida waters, is found along sandy shores, canals and shallow sand or mud bars. Its coloration varies somewhat with its habitat. It sometimes is a grayish silver with a reddish orange iridescence or a copper red. A dark spot at the base of the tail is a distinguishing mark of the channel bass.

This fish is a bottom feeder and is taken in the surf with natural baits. In shallow-water flats, casting with plug or fly will produce good results.

The average weight of these fish usually runs from 2 to 10 pounds. Occasionally, however, channel bass are boated that run up to 40 pounds.

The channel bass is considered fair for food value.

SPANISH MACKEREL (Scomberomorus Maculatus)

This fish has been Florida's No. 1 commercial fish, having been netted in large quantities along the state's entire coast line.

The Mackerel can give an angler exciting sport if taken on a light casting rod. A half-ounce feather or small spoon trolled at a 6-to-8-m.p.h. speed will produce good results and give the angler plenty of sport and in addition will furnish him with a real table delicacy.

In color, the Mackerel is a dark purplish with silver on the bottom, and on the sides are found numerous golden yellow spots.

The average Mackerel runs from 2 to 5 pounds, with an occasional catch running up to 10 pounds.

WHITE GRUNT (Haemulon Plumien)

Another common member of the Grunt family, he is found on any suitable bottom and around reefs. Average weight of the White Grunt caught are small, though they do run to 4 pounds and are excellent table food.

BLACK GROUPER (Myeteroperca Bonaci)

Found over the reefs and a bottom feeder, the Black Grouper is not as common as the red—but when hooked, he puts up a better battle than other varieties of grouper.

The Black Grouper also has the ability to change color from a whitish grey to almost black with an undertone of horizontal bars and dots. The color phases of the grouper are at best uncertain, for their color and markings seem to change as they change locations.

The Black Grouper reaches a length of almost 3 feet and in weight up to about 50 pounds.

Tides

Of greatest importance to all surf fishermen, is an accurate tidal chart.

To those who fish from boats in either the inland salt water or the open ocean, accurate tidal information is almost a must.

The following pages of tidal charts are as accurate as possible for this year.

Farming and Cattle

Although Delray Beach is recognized primarily as a Vacation and Resort Community—it has, for many years, had an agricultural background. In fact, the original town (known then as Linton) economy was based on agriculture. At that time, tomatoes and pineapples were the principal crop, even several canneries were established to help in the marketing of the crops which were abundant. However, droughts and transportation difficulties caused the closing of the plants.

Agriculture took a new lease on the life of the community during the war years and is now a major factor in the area. Beans, tomatoes, cucumbers, pepper, corn and watermelon are a few of the principal crops.

A few years ago the growing of Gladioli for shipment to florists in the North also came to the front as a major agricultural crop. Today, the shipping of Delray Beach-grown gladioli offers employment to many Delray Beach residents.

The cattle industry is also developing very rapidly in the area. This development of farming and cattle raising is having a very marked beneficial effect on the economy of the area.

Welcome to Delray Beach . . .

Yes, "Welcome to Delray Beach . . . The Ocean City." Delray Beach is not a typical resort, you'll find no skyscraper hotels ablaze with neon, no blaring night clubs or beaches that are crowded to the point of being uncomfortable. You'll find, instead, the unspoiled beauty of sun-drenched sea and sand, the friendly people who cherish the gracious and leisurely life they have found here, and a welcome as warm as tropical sunshine.

When in Delray Beach, please come in and register at the Chamber of Commerce, directly on U. S. Highway No. 1, just south of Atlantic Avenue. Free literature is available.

On the following pages you will find a complete alphabetical guide of our Chamber of Commerce members . . . All your demands can be supplied by our members.

The reason we are able to give you this information is through the cooperation of our membership . . . so that they may know we are serving them well, won't you please mention the fact that you received your assistance from the Delray Beach Chamber of Commerce?

Again . . . Welcome to Delray Beach!
